LESOTHO'S TOURISM INDUSTRY SET TO EXPAND IN 2013

September marked National Tourism Month in Lesotho, and was heralded by a series of events that took place across the country leading up to the celebration of World Tourism Day on the 27th of September.

Festivities were organized by the Lesotho Tourism Development Corporation (LTDC), which focuses on developing and maintaining a vibrant tourism industry through sustainable economic growth, job creation, poverty alleviation, and protection of the natural and cultural environment in Lesotho.

This year's World Tourism Day commemoration was preceded by several lead-up activities, including road shows and events held at tourism highlight locations throughout Lesotho, such as Molele's Hoek and Leribe. Many of the events focused on promoting and encouraging growth of domestic tourism, as well as building recognition of the products made in Lesotho.

The commemoration itself was designed around the global World Tourism Day 2012 theme of sustainable energy, and celebrations included tree-planting to avoid soil erosion, as well as participation of tourism stakeholders, including local craftspeople, tour operators, and the Department of the Environment.

In addition to the work of the LTDC, the local private sector has also contributed new ideas towards promoting tourism in Lesotho. There are plans in place to hold the first-ever "Miss Tourism Lesotho" beauty pageant in early December of this year, which seeks to promote domestic tourism through modeling.

Hosted by local promotions company Rainbow Promotions, the competition is the first of its kind. In addition to receiving a number of prizes, the pageant winner will participate in one of the domestic tourism promotional road shows to be held next year.

Event organizers have expressed hope that the pageant will not only encourage a dynamic turnout, but also motivate the country's younger generation to take greater pride in Lesotho's unique natural endowments.

Overall, these events provide promise for Lesotho to continue on the road to becoming a "must-visit" Southern African destination, whose mountains, culture, and environment beckon with adventure.

At a Glance: Tourism in Lesotho

- Lesotho is the ideal destination for outdoor adventure tourists, hikers, and nature enthusiasts. The Drakensberg and Maluti Mountains frame the country's pristine and rugged landscape, earning Lesotho titles such as "the Mountain Kingdom" and the "Kingdom in the Sky."
- Lesotho has a wide range of outdoor activities to offer, from pony trekking and horseback riding in the highlands, to skiing in the slopes of the Mahlesela Pass, to hiking up to Thabana-Ntlenyana (3,482 m), the highest peak in Africa south of Kilimanjaro.
- Other popular activities also include rock climbing and rappelling, bird-watching, boating, swimming in Lesotho's fresh mountain waters, trout fishing, and mountain biking. Lesotho is also easily accessible to both domestic and foreign tourists, and can be reached by road or a quick flight from South Africa.
- In addition, there are many ways for visitors to learn about Lesotho's rich cultural and prehistoric heritage, such as through viewing San rock art, dinosaur footprints, the annual Morija arts festival, and visiting local villages, where traditional Basotho lifestyles and culture remain intact.

GOVERNMENT LEADING THE EFFORT ON CLIMATE CHANGE AND FOOD SECURITY ISSUES

Climate change poses an increasing challenge to many Sub-Saharan African nations; however, some countries that have been particularly impacted - such as Lesotho - are finding innovative and long-term solutions to address climate-related issues.

For the past several months Lesotho has struggled with food shortages and low crop yields as a result of severe drought followed by heavy flooding - extreme weather that is believed to be linked to climate change.

In August, the Government of Lesotho declared a National Food Crisis, and in late September Prime Minister Motsoahae Thabane appealed to the international community for urgent humanitarian assistance during his address at the UN General Assembly in New York.

Estimates suggest nearly one-third of Lesotho's two million citizens have been affected by the recent food shortage; small-scale farmers, sharecroppers and their families residing in Lesotho's Southern Highlands have been most severely impacted by consecutive crop failures.

In response to the food shortages, development partners and UN agencies have worked with the Government of Lesotho to identify immediate and long-term solutions. The United Nations World Food Program (WFP) has launched an emergency operation to assist 200,000 Lesotho residents with immediate food aid over the next several months; at the same time, the WFP is also working with other UN agencies (such as the Food and Agricultural Organization [FAO]) to find longer-term solutions to food security issues in the region, particularly those linked to climate change. The FAO also recently launched a program intended to help farmers in Lesotho access better agricultural inputs and rehabilitate environmentally degraded land.

In particular, the Government is working with the FAO to train farmers in new methods and technologies that will enhance output through conservation agriculture, which promotes crop diversification and helps maintain soil quality. In one method farmers dig basins in planting areas, then fill the holes with manure and fertilizer; after it rains, farmers plant seeds in the basins, thus minimizing water evaporation and maximizing crop yield.

Although the impacts of climate change on food security cannot be solved in the short-term, the Government remains resolute in pursuing strategies like these to better combat food security challenges and strengthen local farmers' capacity to adapt to climate change in Lesotho.

SOUTHERN AFRICA TRADE HUB CONDUCTS DATA ANALYSIS TRAINING

This past September, the Southern Africa Trade Hub (SATH) conducted a Trade Data Analysis Training in Maseru for technical staff at Lesotho's Ministry of Trade, Industry, Cooperatives and Marketing (MTCIM) and other stakeholders working on trade issues.

SATH is a program funded by the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), with the objective of increasing international competitiveness, intra-regional trade and food security in Southern Africa.

Based in Gaborone, Botswana, the Trade Hub delivers targeted technical assistance to governments, the private sector and civil society organizations to advance the regional trade investment agenda within Southern Africa.

As the ability to conduct high-quality analysis of trade data is essential for policy making, government officials must know where to obtain reliable trade data, how to analyze it and formulate related policy recommendations.

The SATH two-day training was designed to enable participants to analyze trade policy issues and trade data, thereby enhancing trade negotiations and facilitating an improved trade environment.

Knowledge of trade and tariff analysis is crucial for implementing the government's plan to further diversify export-led growth. In order to create trade and tariff statistics, officials need a thorough knowledge of relevant databases, trade classifications, indicators, and related information technology.

The workshop covered all of these knowledge areas and also engaged participants in hands-on exercises using World Integrated Trade Solution (WITS) database software.
